

Epta UK keeps it cool at The Foodservice Show

Epta UK is showcasing its larp refrigerated solutions at the Foodservice Show.

Epta UK is utilising today's Foodservice Show and Professional Kitchen Show to present its larp refrigeration range and other solutions for the Ho.Re.Ca. world.

The show, at the Birmingham NEC, is an opportunity to network and meet buyers in search of equipment for professional kitchens.

Epta UK is expanding its presence in the food and beverage market with integral refrigeration solutions for front and back of house use.

The manufacturer's stand (number 408) features the New York vending machine dedicated to the sale of packaged ice cream and a range of chilled display cabinets for food and beverages. The design features clean lines and maximum personalisation, thanks to the digital print directly on the sheet metal.

The style associates straight glass doors and total transparency with LED lighting. The larp solutions also use natural refrigerant, propane R290.

Finally, the stand is also presenting a selection of rear cabinets in stainless steel.

The Foodservice Show is also hosting Salon Culinaire, the UK's largest cooking competition, which sees 300 major chefs battle it out. Epta UK is involved in the event: the kitchens will be equipped with Epta supplied plug-ins, including the Tango Next, suitable to enhance a range of fresh and frozen products in reduced spaces.
